

Poydyom miliy

(Russia)

Poydyom miliy (pigh-DYOHM MEE-lee), a dance whose title translates as "Come, my darling," is a girls' khorovod (round dance) from central Russia. It is based on traditional patterns found in girls' dances but it is not a traditional dance. The dance was researched by Hennie Konings who then introduced it in the Netherlands in 1995 and taught it at the University of the Pacific Stockton Folk Dance Camp in 1996.

Cassette: Konings - Stockton 1996, Side A/1.

3/4 meter

Formation: Single circle of cpls, W to R of ptr, facing in LOD (CCW) with hands joined in V-pos. Although Poydyom was originally introduced as a dance for two girls, it was taught as a cpl dance (1 M, 1 W). The following description matches that teaching.

Steps and Styling: A walking step is used throughout the dance, 1 step to a ct. When stepping forward, land smoothly on the ball of the ft rather than the heel.
Footwork is the same for all.
